June Travis, a Red Circle appearing on her hand, discovers that she is the daughter of "Circle" Jim Borden, who tried to destroy his family and its Red Circle birthmark of crime. June, pitying the poor, robs a lean shark and is almost caught by Detective Lamar. Mary, the nurse, clears June and the latter, in a man's garb, rescues an incriminating toat from the police. Seen climbing in her boudeir window, Jane is in danger of baring her secret surmised by Mrs. Travis. Chief of Police Allen and Lamar are baffled by the appearance of the Red Circle on the "mans" hand, which one of the policemen had seen on the "man" that took the coat.

"Smilling" Sam Eagan, a former pal of Jim Borden's, but now a "reformed" cobbler and level fence is visited by Lamar, in the hope that he might throw some light on the mystery.

bler and jewel fence is visited by Lamar, in the hope that he might throw some light on the mystery.

Lamar pumps old Eagan without learning anything to add to his small store of information with regard to the history of the Red Circle.

June enters the shop to bid old Eagan farewell before going away for the sumer, in time to save Lamar from a tour-derous attack by the old cobbler. Lamar promises to call at their home in Surfton. Plans for the trip absorb him and he forms Eagan for the present.

Eagan sends his confederate, Alma La Eagan to operate at the Surfton Hotel bail

On the same train with the detective is Alma LaSalle, accomplice of "Smiling" Sam, who has come to Surfton to operate. The men are at the station to meet Lamar, Walking along the beach discussing the case, they meet June.

After exchanging pleasantries, they part with an understanding that they are all to be present at the ball to be held in the hotel that evening. Mary and Mrs. Travis accompany June.

(Continued from Yesterday.) THE Travis car turned into the drive leading to the hotel. June squeezed Mrs. Travis' hand under the robes. "Just look at the crowd!" she exclaimed with delight. "This is going to be the best dance of the season. I see Nell Ferguson. Don't you see her standing next to that second pillar, talking to Warren Pearson, mother? She's got on that embroidered thing her uncle brought her from Japan. 1 must dance with Warren-he's dream."

"I meant a dream of a dancer, moth-I'm not a bit interested in Warrie Pearson if that's what you mean.

An attendant in livery helped them from the car. June took hold of Mary's hand and helped her up the steps. "Just don't you let me catch you firting-that's all," she whispered wickedly in the old woman's ear; and Mrs. Travis wondered what Mary's sudden indignant exclamation was about. "Every one's going inside, dear," the nurse said, as they reached the top of the steps. "Let me take your things to the coat room or you'll be late for the first dance." "Oh, I don't care about the first dance. I haven't promised it to any one. I'm going to see who's here first. Stay out here with me just a minute. She walked to one of the long French windows and looked inside.
